TREATMENT

Written by Mardi Hardwick

Timespacers is a science fiction film with many special musical numbers depicting the life of David Michaelson. The story begins when David is seven years old and with death of his Mother. Because his Father is a noted Physician, David is devastated and blames him then - and later on - for not being able to keep his Mother from dying; all through the film David's resentment resurfaces.

From an early age, David feels he is chosen for the mission of finding the secret of living forever and is driven to proceed against many difficult obstacles. The audience doesn't know if David had a dream or if he in fact has some special calling on his life, but in either case, nothing seems to stop David from his goal. The opening scene will be spectacular, with a laser-lighting extravaganza, enhancing what appears to be David's mystical experience.

The conflict between David and his Father is ongoing through the film, which is complicated when Dr. Michaelson remarries a beautiful, much younger woman.

David is assisted in the scientific field with a colleague, John Barton. Angelia Anderson is also involved in the work with his many secret experiments. Angelia is the light of his life, a beautiful lady, who teaches David much about love, happiness and the true purpose of living.

In the laboratory, David discovers that tears - crying is part of the secret formula. This film will show how the healing takes place.

When David intertwines his secret formula with his tear-theory, and he strongly believes he has found the answer, he is unable to get clearance to move forward because of the rules and standards of the AMA. This frustration with the Director of the AMA and his affiliation with Dr. Michaelson, David's Father, really escalates the situation to fury. Against all odds - and against all warnings, David gets some volunteers to test it and he is awarded for his efforts by the President of the United States.

But - is it too late? David tries to prove the merit of his discovery and takes a dose of his own medicine with surprising results just before the awards presentation ceremony.

This is a love story between David and Angelia - a friendship between David and John Barton - a respectful relationship with Professor Weisman - a mystery as to who is leaking all the secret information to the AMA - an education about the human bodies and the importance of crying - and a final ending about the true meaning of life.

Today there is strong scientific proof on the merit of crying. Through an enzyme contained in tears, bacteria and viruses are destroyed and it may also help to rid the body of harmful chemical by products of stress. In addition, crying gives vascular, circulatory, respiratory and the nervous system a workout which provides psychological relief, relieves tensions and expresses emotions. Heart disease, peptic ulcers, colitis, asthma, skin eruptions and host of stress-related disorders may result from repressing tears.
